Perry Ho

Mr Perry is currently an adjunct lecturer and has been teaching undergraduate business modules for more than 5 years. He has delivered lectures on "Micro & Macroeconomics", "Managerial Economics", "International Economics" and "Economics of Leisure & Tourism" for UK and Australia University programs. He is also involved in research and designing of new courses and materials. On top of the local duties, Mr. Perry is also a visiting lecturer to Uzbekistan, China and India where he teaches advanced diploma and undergraduate programs.

Mr Perry graduated with a Master of Economics and prior to full time teaching, he was a Senior Analyst in a foreign bank providing analytic and research support.

Why You Chose To Teach?

I have started part time teaching while I was still working full time in the bank. It was tough and burned out but thinking back to when I was a student and along the way many teachers stood up and made a difference in my life, it was worth it. I wasn't really a studious kid when I was younger but my teachers did not look down and give up on me but continued to encourage me. I am glad that I am able to pay it forward just like them, continue to touch the lives of students, making connections that can last a lifetime and providing them with inspiration that will take them places in their lives

Making Learning And Life Meaningful For Your Students:

I have always enjoyed working with weaker students as I was one before. The ability to successfully encourage them through periods of difficult times and lack of progress is both fulfilling and a great sense of achievement. Apart from academically strong, I believe character development is essential as well for students to reach their potential and lead productive lives.

What You Hope To Help Students To Become
:

It is joyful in seeing the difference students make as they gain new insights, become more interested in a subject and learn about themselves. It is even more pleasurable in seeing students becoming lifelong learners in pursue of knowledge for either personal or professional reasons.